OBSERVATIONS ON VOTER TURNOUT

GENERAL ELECTION - 1984

A study prepared by the Committee for the Study of the American Electorate (CSAE) on voter turnout in the general election of November 6, 1984, found that on the national level, of those who could have voted, 92,707,218, or 53.3% did so. This slight increase of 0.7% over the presidential election of 1980, marked the first time there was a gain in participation nationally since 1960, when voter turnout peaked at 62.8%.

In Maryland, on November 6, 1,695,924, or 51.4% of those eligible to vote did so — falling behind the national average by 1.9 percentage points, but still an increase of 0.7 percentage points over 1980.

Nationally, the increase in voting was attributed by CSAE to the rise in registration. Between 1980 and 1984, twelve million potential voters were put on the registration books throughout the country, raising enrollment to 73% of those eligible. Regrettably, only about four million of the twelve million new voters turned out in November, indicating that a majority of the newly registered voters did not exercise their franchise. The CSAE study further indicated that turnout among registered voters in 1984, was 10.8% below that in 1960.

Maryland's registration increased by 9.1% between 1980 and 1984 - a net gain of 189,138. Removals during 1984 totalled 100,810.

During the four year period between the last two general elections, the Republican Party and the Declines-and-Others increased by 12.3% each; the Democratic Party gained 7.7%.
